bic, its houses crowded close together in the one of the Great Blasket that faced the mainland and offered shelter.
The islanders were pragmatic people. In the years after the evacuation they returned in ~~numbers~~ to strip their former homes of doors, roof beams and slates, and anything else that might be useful in their new lives.

At the top of the village, way above, was the two-storey house where Peig Sayers had lived. It had been modern and strong in 1910, but the winds had punctured the slate roof and blown out the windows. In the seventies it was bought by a rich and eccentric pilot from Alabama called Taylor Collings, who visited the Great Blasket on holiday and fell in love with it.
Seized with an ambition to rebuild the village as a holiday resort, he called on exiled islanders and bought their plots.
